Each year, thousands of Rhode Island families lose their power because they can't pay their electric bills. To help prevent that, we're putting together simple, low-tech weatherizing kits for low-income families referred to us by local helping agencies, and training teams of community- and faith-based youth group members, and adult supervisors, who will install them, and pass on energy saving tips and referrals to agencies that can help even more.

We're starting small this year, with about 20 families next fall.

There's a long waiting list for permanent help. This is a gap we can fill!
